

Types of Clients

We find there are several types of clients who benefit from the Unified Healing Therapy™ process.

The first stages of healing are the people with:

Pain Disorders, PTSD and Anxiety – people who have found minimal relief through traditional or other alternative treatments. Includes people who deal with emotional pain such as grief or depression.

Rehabilitative – those recovering from surgeries, car accidents, or injuries that did not heal properly. Provides support for those receiving pre and post cancer treatments and helps support addiction recovery.

The advanced stages are the people who are seeking:

Prevention – to overcome recurring health problems and rebuild to strengthen what was lost. Prevent further pain, illness and disease, and avoid unnecessary surgeries. Release the accumulative negative effects of stressors (ex: from family, work, overwhelming events or diagnoses).

These advanced stages of Unified Healing Therapy™ aren't just meant for aches and pains – it has been shown that more frequent visits develop a better brain. Just like more exercise and good nutrition develops better fitness, a better and more developed brain opens up new pathways in your brain that give you better coping skills to handle stress, recover quicker and help the body, mind and brain heal.
